

Do Things In The Right Time | Bedtime Stories For Adults

Allen had a field of his own. By the time everyone else was plowing the field Allen was idle with no thought of his field.

Allen's wife noticed this and told him to lock the plow in the field and plow. Allen bought it in one ear and left it in the other ear.

All the other farmers started irrigating the field and started doing agricultural work. Seeing this, Allen said that we can cultivate our field later.

Seeing this, Allen's wife became angry. She persuaded Allen to cultivate.

The lazy Allen was just idle so he could take care of them later. Rice started emptying in the rice bundle at Allen's house, he ran out of money to buy rice for the meal.

As the harvest season approached, other farmers plucked the paddy from their fields and carried the paddy in bundles.

Seeing that, Allen ended up jealous . He was worried that his family was living in poverty today because he had not finished farming on time.

He corrected himself to do any work over time.

Justice: Any action should be done in a timely manner and completed as soon as the crop is harvested according to the season.
