

Will a crow by bathing three times a day become a crane | proverb story

John is the character who helps the people suffering on poverty. He was going to the wedding in the Amman Hall. On the way there, a twenty-year-old young boy, asked him for money to get some food as he was very hungry.

John replied him that "I am going to my friends house to attend a wedding function, so if you accompany with me I will get you some food there first and later I will make a way to get rid off your hunger permanently".

In the wedding hall, some people asked John, "Who is this, your brother?". John said that he is a very close relation boy to him." When the marriage was over, the lunch began to be held. John took the boy to have lunch.

Both of them ate much to fulfill their stomach. Since John travelled from Kodaikanal early morning he felt sleepy and he lied in the auditoriam to have a small sleep.

He was on half sleep and he heard some noises that was disturbing his sleep, he got up and saw people running here and there he stopped a man and asked him that "why he was running?"

The man replied that "the boy you got here for function stole the bride's jewels and ran out so all are running to catch him."

Suddenly he was brought in front of John and everyone slapped him, as the food he ate came out and the dress he wore turn to pieces.

It was sad to see his situation but John got anger and told him that "The crow cannot become a crane even after bathing for three seasons".

John felt bad regarding the boys act whom he thought to help and with that disappointment he travelled back to home.

More stories

<https://www.shortstoryenglish.com>