

Loss of the Sheep | Moral Stories in English

The lobby is called two costs. It is very applicable to a widow woman named Alice. Alice was raising a sheep. The sheep was well bulked. Its body was densely furred. Sheep fur would be trimmed frequently.

Only then the sheep will grow well. Apart from that some people would buy sheep fur for wool weaving. Some people who knew that good money would be gained, advised her about it.

There are some people who cut sheep fur. But they should be paid.

Wages cannot be said to be high. But the widow did not want to spend that small amount.

What great magic trick is it to trim sheep fur? If you take a pair of scissors in your hand, you can cut the sheep's hair a little bit.

Alice thought that doing that would save two or three rupees. She immediately took a pair of scissors and began to cut the sheep's fur.

Previously, she was not accustomed to cutting the fur of the sheep, so she unknowingly cutted the flesh of the sheep with a razor blade while cutting the fur.

The goat couldn't bear the pain and screamed in agony. She got scared and stopped. She was left wondering if it would cost money to take it to the veterinary hospital. The sheep died in one week due to pus in the place where it was cut.

The widow, who wanted to save money, suffered a lot by the loss of a sheep.
